

Slater Street Update – Dudley Creek works

August 6 2018

As you may have noticed, Slater Street has now reopened around the area of St Albans Creek, between Guild Street and Dudley Street.

Slater Street/North Avon Road intersection is also now open.

City Care have been in Slater Street around St Albans Creek replacing earthquake damaged wastewater laterals. This section of Slater Street has a temporary seal until City Care can complete some additional work on the creek between Slater Street and Hills Road. This work is expected to take around a week.

Downer will then come in and reinstate the road permanently. Traffic management will be in place for the re-sealing, but the road will not need to be closed again for this work to be done.

Contractors will then tidy the site and be out of the area as planned by the end of August.

Please note that temporary fencing will remain around active worksites (for safety reasons) and to protect newly seeded and planted areas while they establish.

Construction compound sites

The two Dudley Creek work compounds sites (the former Anglican Living Site on Guild Street and the old Shirley Community Centre site) are also on track to be tidied and vacated by the end of the month.

Dudley Creek works communications

As we head into the last month of these works, we will continue to communicate directly with residents living immediately close to the worksites, and any works notices can be found at www.ccc.govt.nz/dudleycreek

Please also keep an eye on the Community Board's Facebook page for updates.
